CONTRIBUTORS

Teresita ANG SEE is a former president of the Philippine Association for Chinese Studies. She is the founding president of Kaisa Para Sa Kaunlaran, a movement that aims to promote the full integration of Chinese Filipinos into mainstream Philippine society and tap their full potential for nation-building. She is an executive trustee of the Kaisa Heritage Center, which houses Bahay Tsinoy, museum of Chinese in Philippine life and the Chinben See Memorial Library. She is a past president of the International Society for the Study of Chinese Overseas (2004-2007) and served as its secretary-treasurer (2007-2016). She has authored, co-authored, edited, and co-edited numerous books on Chinese Filipinos and Philippines-China relations. She was also the founding chairperson of the Movement for Restoration of Peace and Order, spokesperson of the Citizens Action Against Crime, and vice-chairperson of the Philippine National Police Foundation.

Ericson M. BACULINAO is currently the bureau chief for NBC News US television network in Beijing, China. He probably qualifies as the “most overstaying” Filipino in China, having lived there for the past 48 years. He graduated cum laude with a bachelor’s degree in political science. After his tenure as the University of the Philippines Student Council Chairman in 1971, he joined a Philippine youth delegation trip to China for a three-week study tour that became a long period of exile due to the dangers of persecution under the Marcos martiallaw dictatorship. He worked in China’s state farms and learned the Chinese language and modern history. He began a career in journalism in the mid-1980s, winning an Emmy Award in 1989 as part of the NBC News team that reported on China's Tiananmen crisis, and to this day closely follows major strategic trends involving China's domestic and foreign policy.

Rommel C. BANLAOI is currently the president of the Philippine Association for Chinese Studies and a member of the management board of the World Association for Chinese Studies. He is a professorial lecturer at the Department of International Studies at Miriam College while he serves as an adjunct professor at the National Institute for South China Sea Studies (China). He is the chairman of the Philippine Institute for Peace, Violence and Terrorism Research, member of the board of directors of the China-Southeast Asia Research Center on the South China Sea (China), and member of the international panel of experts of the Maritime Awareness Project of the National Bureau of Asian Research (USA). He finished his BA and MA in Political Science at the University of the Philippines, Diliman and his PhD in International Relations at Jinan University.

Theresa Chong CARIÑO is a founding member of the Philippines Association for Chinese Studies. A Singaporean, she taught political science at De La Salle University and established the China Studies Program in 1983. As director of the Philippine-China Development Resource Center, she promoted educational exchanges on sustainable development. In 2001, she became the director of Amity Foundation Hong Kong. A research consultant and Amity advisor, she continues to write on themes related to religion and development in China. Books she has authored/edited include: China and the Overseas Chinese in Southeast Asia (1985); Chinese Big Business in the Philippines: Leadership and Political Change (1998); Christianity and Social Development in China (2014); Toward a Shared Sustainable Future: The Role of Religion, Values and Ethics (2018).

Tina S. CLEMENTE is a professor at the Asian Center, University of the Philippines, Diliman (UPD). She earned a PhD and MA in Economics as well as a BS in Business Economics at the School of Economics, UPD. She is a former president of the Philippine Association for Chinese Studies. She is a resource speaker and subject matter expert for international and national publics, including the Development Academy of the Philippines and National Defense College of the Philippines. She was a senior and associate editor of Asian Politics & Policy, associate editor of Social Science Diliman, and an issue editor of the Asian Studies Journal: Journal of Critical Perspectives on Asia. She edited and contributed in China Studies in the Philippines: Intellectual Paths and the Formation of a Field (2018). She also headed the 2016 China Strategic Studies Program of the UP Center of Integrative and Development Studies.

Fr. Aristotle DY, SJ is the vice president of the Philippine Association for Chinese Studies. He earned a BS Management-Honors degree at the Ateneo de Manila University, before entering the Society of Jesus in 1993. After priestly ordination in 2004, he became the director of Jesuit Communications, and taught Chinese studies at the Ateneo de Manila University. He proceeded to earn a master's in Buddhist studies from the University of Hong Kong, and a PhD in the Study of Chinese Buddhism from the University of London, returning to Manila in 2013. His research on Chinese Buddhism in the Philippines has been published in the Philippines and in international journals. He is currently the president of Xavier School, which has campuses in San Juan and Laguna.

Jaime A. FLORCRUZ is an adjunct professor at Peking University and a veteran Chinawatcher. He was CNN's Beijing bureau chief and correspondent, responsible for strategic planning of the network's news coverage of China (2001-2014). He served as TIME Magazine's Beijing bureau chief and correspondent (1982-2000) and Newsweek's Beijing reporter (1981). He is considered the dean of the foreign press corps in Beijing, having been the longest-serving foreign correspondent in China until his retirement in 2015. He was a two-term president of the Foreign Correspondents' Club of China (1988-90 and 1996-1999) and founding president of the Peking University International Students' Alumni Association (2010-present). He co-authored Massacre at Beijing, a book about the 1989 Tiananmen protests (Warner Books, 1989) and Not On Our Watch, a book about campus journalists during the martial law years in the Philippines (2012). He received his BA in Chinese history from Peking University (1982) and majored in advertising at the Polytechnic University of the Philippines in 1971.

Benito LIM was an academic, policy expert, and media resource person. He taught political science and Asian studies at the University of the Philippines and, upon retirement, was a lecturer on Chinese studies at the Ateneo de Manila University. He wrote high-impact policy papers for the government think-tank Philippine Center for Advanced Studies during the 1970s. Professor Lim helped craft the proposal that led to the naturalization of thousands of alien Chinese born and living in the Philippines in 1975. He was a regular resource person on domestic politics, foreign policy, geopolitics, and security issues for local and international news outlets and think-tanks. He was a senior fellow at the Center for People Empowerment in Governance. He received his MA in Communications from the University of Pennsylvania.

Ellen H. PALANCA is a former president and current advisory council member of the Philippine Association for Chinese Studies. She spends her professional life mostly at the Ateneo de Manila University where she is now a professor emeritus. In the last few decades, she served as chair of the Department of Economics and later as the director of the Chinese Studies Program. Before her retirement, she helped set up the Confucius Institute at the Ateneo de Manila University in 2006 and has been the director of the Institute since then. Dr. Palanca finished a PhD in Economics at the University of the Philippines, Diliman. She was visiting professor at the Shanghai University of Finance and Economics for one school year (1985-1986) where she taught Western economics and international economics (very new courses then in China) to both graduate and undergraduate students. This 10-month teaching stint allowed her to understand China and its people better and to truly realize the change that has happened there.

Lucio Blanco PITLO III is a Research Fellow at the Asia-Pacific Pathways to Progress Foundation and was a lecturer in the Chinese Studies Program at the Ateneo de Manila University and the International Studies Department at De la Salle University. He is also a contributing editor (Reviews) for Asian Politics & Policy. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the Philippine Association for Chinese Studies. He was a participant in numerous local and regional academic and Track Two discussions on maritime security and connectivity. His commentaries and opinion pieces on Philippine and ASEAN relations with major powers, notably China and the United States, regional connectivity, and maritime issues appear in the South China Morning Post, China-US Focus, Center for Strategic and International Studies' Asia Maritime Transparency Initiative, and Asia Times. He obtained his Master of Laws from Peking University and is presently pursuing his MA in International Affairs at American University in Washington DC.

Aurora ROXAS-LIM was a professor and dean at the University of the Philippines Asian Center (1994-1997); curator at the UP Vargas Museum (1988-1994); and deputy director of the Special Project in Archeology and Fine Arts of the Southeast Asia Ministries of Education Organization (1985-1986). She was also a lecturer of Chinese studies at the Ateneo de Manila University. Trained in English literature at the University of the Philippines, she took up MA in Humanities at the University of Chicago and went on to Cornell University for her doctoral studies in art history and archaeology of Southeast Asia, minor in Chinese art. She wrote numerous scholarly papers on art history, archaeology, trade ceramics, maritime history, and seafarers. She is a member of the UNESCO research committee on the art and archaeology of the Silk Route. She is one of the founding members of the Philippine Association for Chinese Studies, served as president (2001-2006) and was an editor of the PACS Newsletter.

Aileen SAN PABLO-BAVIERA was a professor of China studies and dean (2003-2009) at the Asian Center, University of the Philippines, Diliman (UPD). She was the founder, president, and CEO of the Asia-Pacific Pathways to Progress Foundation and editor-in-chief of Asian Politics & Policy (2010-2020). She also taught political science at the UPD and Ateneo de Manila University. She was an executive director of the Philippine-China Development Resource Center (1998-2001) and headed the Center for International Relations and Strategic Studies of the Foreign Service Institute (1993-1998). Dr. Baviera authored and edited numerous publications on contemporary China studies, ASEAN-China relations, regional integration, Asia-Pacific security, and maritime and territorial disputes. She received her BS in Foreign Service, cum laude (1979), MA in Asian Studies (1987), and PhD in Political Science (2003) from the UPD. She also studied the Chinese language at Beijing Language Institute (1982) and modern Chinese history at Peking University (1983).

Chito STA. ROMANA has lived in China for more than four decades, where he worked as a journalist and a diplomat. He was the former Beijing bureau chief for ABC News and covered major events in China, witnessing its transformation from a Third World country to a major world power. He is currently the Philippine Ambassador to China. He was appointed to this post by Philippine President Rodrigo Duterte in October 2016 and formally presented his credentials in Beijing in March 2017. He was also a former president of the Philippine Association for Chinese Studies and a lecturer on Chinese politics at the Asian Center, University of the Philippines. He completed his undergraduate studies at the De La Salle University. He studied Mandarin at the Beijing University of Language and Culture and earned a master's degree in international relations at the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

Completing this volume would not have been possible without the contributions of many special people. I thank Lucio Blanco Pitlo III for valuable inputs in selecting the articles, which represent a breadth of subjects: politics, security, diplomacy, economics, society, and culture. Great thanks to the authors for their erudite and timeless pieces and for taking the time to respond to my queries and comments. I also thank Dorcas Juliette Ramos-Caraig, Lucio, and his sisters Cynthia, Lenelyn, and Catherine, for encoding the manuscripts. Dorcas and Lucio helped in the first review of the encoded work while Liza Lopez did the second. I thank Liza for her patience in closely working with me, dealing with my comments, incorporating my edits, and taking care of the layout and cover design. I thank Richie Santos for her thoughtful administrative support and for scanning the photos. Heartfelt thanks to the Board of Directors and Advisory Council of the Philippine Association for Chinese Studies for the support and encouragement.
